If you ever have to decide whether to go to an amusement park or water park, there is only one answer, and that is to go to an amusement park as they are way better overall! Amusement parks are much more fun and is a far more inclusive space than water parks. Amusement parks have better accessibility for everyone and can be attended to year around no matter what the weather is. Amusement parks are almost always themed which create a more entertaining environment for anyone to attend. The convenience and accessibility for amusement parks is far superior to water parks which makes it a better option for kids, families, and adults.

Hook

Amusement parks such as the local Playland and PNE is far more accessible than a water park like Big Splash. Accessibility means that anyone and everyone can attend without discrimination to their physical ability. People with any disabilities or handicaps such as those in wheelchairs, crutches or any other impairments can still go to amusement parks to enjoy the various forms of entertainment. Whereas these same groups of people may find a lack of entertainment at waterparks as they are unable to climb the many flights of stairs to get to the top of the waterslides. Furthermore, amusement parks are much more accessible to people of all ages, including toddlers, infants, and those that are not tall enough to play on the water slides. The reason they would find amusement parks more fun is because amusement parks tend to have different forms of entertainment such as carnival games, shows (such as dog races, pig races, duck races, etc.) and other things that they can still enjoy. Even children that are not able to ride the roller coasters because of height or age can still play many carnival games to win prizes that they will remember for the rest of their lives! Finally, amusement parks are not only fun for children, but many adults find amusement parks more fun to participate because of the different roller coasters, carnival games and entertainment shows for them to enjoy as well. The accessibility of amusement parks makes it superior to water parks as literally anyone and everyone can have fun there.

Though water parks can be very fun, a problem with water parks is that they are only feasible to go to in 3 months out of the whole year. When you live in a city like Vancouver, there are only so many days you can really go to a water park without feeling very cold! Amusement parks are great because they are a year-around activity and will even offer themed events in certain times of the year such as Halloween, Christmas, and more. Amusement parks is an entertaining place to attend for everyone and even when it is cold, you can still have just as much fun when wearing a thick winter coat, something that you couldn't do at a water park. An example of a themed amusement park in the wintertime is Fright Night at the PNE in Vancouver, even though during Halloween, the weather is quite chilly, Fright Night is still a popular amusement park activity because of all the haunted houses, carnival games, and warm food too. Amusement parks can be attended in all 12 months of the year, versus water parks where it is only reasonable to go a few months in the whole year and maybe in some cities that have colder climates, only 1 or 2 months!

While on a similar topic about themed amusement parks, have you ever seen or heard of a themed water park? Maybe, but not as much as you know about themed amusement parks! Think about all the themed popular amusement parks in the world! Furthermore, there are not only themes for amusement parks, but there are also television or movie inspired rides, studio themed amusement parks, and much more! Themed parks such as Disneyland, Universal Studios, or even Legoland provides a fun entertaining place for everyone to play at, not only is there whole park themed, but each individual ride is based on a movie or a TV show! Not to mention, most of these amusement parks offer fun rollercoaster rides that is on water! It is truly the best of both worlds to have water themed rides at amusement parks, where you may get splashed a bit but don't have to be shivering in the cold all day long! The themed that amusement parks have create a fun atmosphere for all participants to attend compared to water parks which lack any themes.

Water parks could argue that it is awesome because while having fun, you could also cool off your body with the cold water on a hot summer's day. Whilst true, I would argue that you could do just the same at an amusement park! Have you been on a fast roller coaster ride where the wind is blowing in your face, and you get a nice cool breeze to cool off? Furthermore, at amusement parks, there are more concession stands that sell ice cold drinks, slushies, milk shakes, and many more refreshing cold drinks to help cool you off on a hot day as well! Lastly, various amusement parks have air conditioning at indoor places such as shops, restaurants, and they also have cool mist sprays all around the outside to help cool everyone off!

Amusement parks are superior and should be everyone's number one choice of entertainment to attend, especially over water parks. Amusement parks is far more accessible to all attendees no matter age or physical ability, you can have an injured leg and still have tons of fun at amusement parks. Amusement parks are somewhere you can go year around whether the weather is hot or cold, and most amusement parks have themes which make them far more fun for kids, adults, or anyone! Water parks can be fun; however, amusement parks are far superior to water parks and should be at the top of everyone's list when it comes to places people should go when they are looking to have tons of fun!
